THE ANCIENT GREEKS.

Their Belief Concerning the Seat of Love and Passion.

The Liver Regarded as the Sacred Organ Connected with Love.

The ancient Greeks thought the seat of love and passion was in the liver, and the husband who is bilious, is not half a man. His sluggish liver has filled his blood with bile.

It is all the more counterfeited in the world, red blood full of bile is the worst of all.

We have about 100 quarts of this fluid in the average sized man. It is constantly undergoing change and is maintained from the food we daily consume by a chemical process nature has.

Dominion Parliament.

FIFTH PARLIAMENT—FOURTH SESSION.

FRIDAY, FEB. 26.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Mr. Everett moved and Mr. Ward seconded the motion.

Mr. Blake began to speak at 4.20 and kept the floor, with the exception of two hours at recess, until 8.30. He expressed regret at the absence of the date at which the House had been called together, and said the pledge of a January session had been repeatedly broken. The first part of the speech which he put in the mouth of his excellency said the country was in a prosperous condition. This was not the case. Instead of prosperity, a severe and continued depression had settled over the country. He referred to the large losses in working the Intercolonial railway, and looked with alarm upon the large expenditures that we were annually making on capital accounts. In three reports he agreed with the Government—first, in the display of force proposed to be made in the spring in the North-West, next in the changes proposed in the judiciary system in the territories, and third, in the determination to give representation in Parliament to the people of the territories. He made a significant remark in commenting upon one of Sir John Macdonald's speeches in London, England. He, for one, he said, must decline to accept any responsibility for any policy he had in mind in addition and would therefore oppose any plan for closer incorporation with Great Britain. The last it was accompanied with representation in the Parliament of the Empire. In dealing with the reconstruction of the Ministry, he sought to be facetious and quoted that well-known speech of Mr. Macdonald, on Sir Charles Tupper, which has done duty every session since 1869. Throughout there was nothing new, but all was old, stale and unprofitable.

Sir John Macdonald amid deafening cheers began his reply to the leader of the Opposition. He said the hon. gentleman had, during his remarks, done everything in his power to set man against man, neighbor against neighbor, friend against friend. His speech was full of uncharitable remarks and he had attempted to make up all the old debts of bygone days. The hon. gentleman had returned from his recent trip to England with good health but a bad temper. Sir John explained at some length the progress that his Government had made in an attempt to settle the fisheries question. It was to see whether the American Congress would take any action on the proposed treaty to appoint a joint commission to meet the meeting of the present Parliament was delayed so late in the year. The Canadian Government, as such, the hon. gentleman had been abandoned by the United States, had done everything in its power to have it revised. They were not going to degrade themselves any further as a free people in going down on their knees to the Government of the United States to enter into a treaty. When Mr. Blake was Secretary of State he pursued every course made by the Canadian Government. Mr. Blake had pinned his faith on securing the Presidency on his anti-British policy. When the new administration came to power the Government went to them in the most neighborly manner and asked for the appointment of a joint Commission. President Cleveland and Secretary of State Bayard replied the proposal in the most friendly spirit and recommended to both Houses to approve the appointment of such a Commission, not only to enquire into the fisheries question, but the more broad question of the development of international trade. No one regretted more than Mr. Cleveland himself that these recommendations were the fate they had. The Senate Committee on foreign relations, however, had yet to make a report. Sir John said he had some hope that the Morrison bill would become law. Referring to Mr. O'Donoghue's statement, the Minister, Sir John said it was decided that that gentleman should be taken into the Government, but when it was found that such an appointment would weaken the Administration Mr. O'Donoghue admitted the fact and stopped said he was content to enter the Opposition. Sir Richard Cartwright looked up as the next orator. He concluded with these words: "The corruption that now exists in this country is a disgrace to civilization and has never been equalled in English history since the time of Walpole. If it is not speedily checked the dream of a permanent confederation will never be realized, but on the contrary a speedy dissolution will be looked for." Hon. Thos. White, Mr. Davies (King, P. E. I.) and Peter Mitchell continued the debate. Mr. White quoted from files of the Mail to show that Sir John's speech in Canada and in London on Imperial Federation were constant, although Sir Richard said they were not. Mr. Davies had a shot at the fisheries middle, and Hon. Peter fired off a few bullets at both parties, and claimed to be the only independent member in the house, although he was a strong advocate of the N. P. The resolution adopted the address was passed without amendment. The address was then referred to a select committee, who reported it back and it was ordered to be engrossed and forwarded to the Governor-General.

Mr. Hector Langgavin laid on the table the report of the Public Works Department and the House adjourned at 10.45 p. m.

Among other points of motion was one by Judge Cuneo (Montreal East) as follows: "Enquiry of the ministry whether the Government had taken the conviction of Louis Riel appointed a medical commission to enquire into the mental condition of the prisoner; if so, did the said commission forward a report to the Government, and is it the intention of the Government to lay said report before the House and when?"

THE SENATE.

The address was moved by Mr. Bolduc, and seconded by Mr. Clémont.

Mr. Clémont had not taken his seat before Senator Alexander sprang to his feet, and before the astonished House recovered itself said that he had purposely risen before the leader of the Senate Opposition (Hon. R. W. Scott), because that gentleman had shown himself unworthy of his position during the last five sessions. A name ensued, as Mr. Alexander used very strong language. Senator Scott, who in previous years had denounced the contract with the C. P. R., now congratulated the House and the country upon the completion and successful working of the great highway. He prophesied for the railway a prosperous future.

Senator Trudel, in French, attacked the Government for lazing Riel.

The debate was adjourned until Monday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MONDAY, MARCH 1.

Several bills were read a first time.

Sir Richard Cartwright submitted his usual annual question to the Finance Minister: "What was the gross debt of the Dominion on March 1, 1886?"

Mr. McLehane: "Without deducting assets of $72,791,887, the gross debt of the Dominion on March 1, 1886, was $211,314,522."

Sir Richard: "What portion of the gross debt of the Dominion was represented by temporary loans from other parties in Canada or elsewhere?"

Mr. McLehane: "£14,562,807."

Mr. Cuneo asked this question: "Whether the Government, after the conviction of Louis Riel, appointed a medical commission to enquire into the mental condition of the prisoner; if so, did said commission forward a report to the Government and is it the intention of the Government to lay the said report before the House and when?"

report before the House and when?"

Sir John Macdonald said that in consequence of the representations made to the Government by medical practitioners were appointed to enquire into the mental condition of Louis Riel since his conviction. The reports, as well as from the surgeon of the prison, will be laid before the House immediately.

Mr. Clémont, of Harrow, asserted that all the evidence given at the trial of Riel was not printed in the official report.

Hon. Mr. Chapleau corrected the misstatement, and in reply to Mr. Blake said he had no objection to printing the judge's charge.

Notice of motion asking for information and papers covering every conceivable phase of the North-West rebellion and the execution of Riel were sent up to the clerk's table by opposition members by the bushel. If all the returns and papers asked for are submitted to parliament, not a link in the chain of evidence about this outbreak could be missing.

The trade and navigation returns, the public accounts and the auditor-general's and inland revenue reports were laid on the table.

THE SENATE.

In the upper house the debate on the address also continued, and when that body rose at 5.30 the hour was not come. Mr. Clémont, of Harrow, asserted that all the evidence given at the trial of Riel was not printed in the official report.

Ottawa, March 1.

The clause with reference to the completion of the Canadian Pacific Railway is one which is of interest to the people of this country, and it was very fortunate to echo the words of the Speech from the Throne in 1872. It was a pleasant duty for me, and it is equally pleasant for me now to be able to announce that the work which the Government has commenced from ocean to ocean. There was an interruption, the consequence of which we have had to stand, but in a few months work will be resumed, and it is quite possible in the course of next summer to proceed by continuous rail communication from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Certainly the Government which has taken the means of completing such a wonderful work deserves our credit. While there is no reason to suppose that the Government cannot approve, and it is probable that they have done towards the completion of that road, and the country should be proud of the present rulers. They should also be gratified to see the men as those who assumed the responsibility of carrying out such a gigantic and important work, and it is sure to be a successful completion. They will

Hon. Mr. Girard.—I did not mention the hon. gentleman's name.

Hon. Mr. Trudel.—I do not believe that the hon. gentleman is doing it intentionally, but he is departing from the question altogether. In the previous debate I only replied to some of the remarks of my hon. friend from Lauzon, and I did not intend to go into the merits of this question, and, besides, I said that I would not go into the merits of the question because I thought it was understood that it should not be discussed on the Address. The hon. gentleman from St. Boniface speaks in English.

I shall now read to the House the letter to which I have referred. One of them is written from Prince Albert, where I have been blue bloused, and the other is written from Edmonton, in the North-West Territories. The gentleman who writes to me is a half-breed, a young man of education, who draws a parallel between the position of his country as it was some years ago, and its position today.

"It was a blow, and one which had thrown us a long way behind. What did organization in our French parishes? I can truly say that it is as if fire or war had passed over them. I have been there to see you that they present a sad spectacle. What a contrast they furnish to their former condition!"

This other letter, coming from a French-Canadian gentleman established at Edmonton, lines are detestable; but being generous and becoming generous are often very different things. Have you done your grammar exercises yet? Will you ask the teacher of the classmate? Yes. Will be an honest, hard student, and he complacently displays the carefully prepared paper.

"Lend it to me a little while, will you? I haven't begun mine yet, and I'm afraid I'll be too late." Besides, I never could understand grammar as you do.

Will lend the paper. It will be copied, he knows, and he says to himself as he turns away, "It's a shame the way some of the boys cheat. But I can't very well refuse to lend and encourage them when they ask for them; they'd call it selfish and mean."

A Few Farms still for Sale.

TOWNSHIP OF MURRAY.
AFTER the great sale which took place on March 25th, several farms were left for sale. The following are the farms which are still for sale:
THE FARM OF SIDNEY.
